An ancient proverb says that when hard times come, the Samurai welcomes them. Maybe because he's a stupid, would say Cate. No, would answer Ferro: because the more the water, the higher the boat. Even if they haven't understood yet how big is the storm approaching, for Ferro and Cate these will be the most turbulent and adventurous nine months in their life. It usually takes 30 or 40 years for getting ready to be parents, they only have these nine months. But they are just 18, must study for their final exam and, together with their friends, they have to arrange everything for their dream-journey to Spain and Morocco to celebrate the longest summer of their life. Nevertheless, a kid doesn't wait for you to be ready or not, he will come anyway. But if you stay as light as a feather and keep your heart pure, maybe you can still make it.
