Rosa works by night as a street prostitute, job inherited from her mother, Antonia, a kooky elder on wheelchair who now believes herself to be a famous old singer, and makes their daily life a small living hell. They live a tiny apartment in the center of Madrid, and share their rough life with some quarrelsome neighborhoods: Masha (Russian), and Teresa (Cuban). And also Juana, the bitter doorkeeper, married with Paco, once young Rosa's great love and now her best client. Nobody but Lupita, transexual colleague, can make Rosa smile from time to time.

Rosa does not know how to be happy. She is not able to. But the unexpected arrival of a new family member will give her a unique opportunity.
