Four strangers meet through a car-sharing app, and start a car trip together. Everything seems normal but, as it often happens, things are not completely as they look. Paolo is a restless man with a nice demeanor, who seems to be hiding something. Michele and Anna know already each other but haven't mentioned it to their companions. Elisa doesn't know she has a very special link with Paolo. Among idle small talk, laughter and plot twists, they embark on a road-trip comedy with noir undertones, that explores unexpected human relationships. A journey that turns into an adventure destined to change the lives of all the characters involved.

Summer 1975, a 13-year-old girl, suitcase in one hand and a bag of shoes in the other, knocks at an unknown door. Her sister Adriana opens it, her eyes wrinkled, her braids unraveled: they've never seen each other before. So begins the story of a teenager who lost everything overnight: a comfortable home, her closest friends, the unconditional love of her parents - or rather the people she believed were her parents. For "l'Arminuta" (the returned girl) as her peers called her, a new and very different life begins, from the adoptive family to her real one, going from wealth to poverty, both material and moral. Her new home is small, dark, there are brothers everywhere and little food on the table for everyone. But there's Adriana, who shares a bed with her. And there's Vincenzo, who looks at her as if she were already a woman.

Lucy is a ninety-five years old lady. In her apartment, photos turned yellow by the passing time tell the adolescence of a boy who at the time was called Luciano and who was going to live the most terrible period of his life. Lucy is the oldest transsexual woman in Italy. She is among the few survivors of Dachau's concentration camp. Lucy's story tells us the story of the 1900s. The events of his turbulent life become a metaphor for humanity that does not give up and that treasures the most important gift in history, memory, as a unique and irreplaceable starting point.

October 18, 2019, Santiago, Chile. An increase in the price of public transportation sparks an unexpected riot. Popular anger explodes, rooted in decades of discontent as a result of a savage neoliberal system that has deprived people of the most essential services, in a country that has never returned to true democracy thirty years after the end of Pinochet's dictatorship. Since the first days of the rebellion, we begin to hear about a new urban legend, the Primera Linea, a spontaneous security service that defends protesters. Scenes of protest and urban guerrilla warfare cross the streets and squares in the country. The people crowd the famous Plaza Italia, the zero zone of Chilean demonstrations, now renamed Plaza de la Dignidad (Dignity Square).
